Most people know J. K. Rowling as the ① wealthy author of the Harry Potter series. However, before writing Harry Potter, she lived a life of poverty and struggle.

While writing her first novel, Rowling was ② dependent on government aid. She was also recently divorced and raising her baby daughter by herself. In her own words, she was "as poor as it is possible to be in modern Britain, without being homeless."

After completing her first novel in 1995, Rowling sent the book to twelve publishing companies, none of whom wanted to publish it. A year later, one company finally ③ disagreed to publish her novel and printed 1,000 copies of it. Today, those copies are worth about $25,000 each.

J. K. Rowling is one of the world's most ④ famous authors and has a fortune of about $1 billion. It's hard to imagine that the most ⑤ successful writer of our time was once poor and depressed.
